America's veterans have put everything on the line to protect our freedoms and they deserve the best possible care when returning home. As veterans witness President Biden's policies that have resulted in a disastrous withdrawal from Afghanistan, I believe it is vital that we as a nation assure them that they are not alone during this difficult time. The decades of sacrifices our servicemembers have made in defense of our country have been critical to our security, and we are safer because of them. More importantly, to all of those who have served or are currently serving- We stand with you. Your service is valued, and your sacrifice will never be forgotten. There are many resources available to our Veterans, especially mental health resources. It is vital to remind our Veteran community that they are not alone during this difficult time.
