Hoosiers, Summertime provides a well-deserved break for our hard-working teachers after a long school year, and it's also filled with opportunities for our educators to discover new ways to reach their students in the classroom in the upcoming year. Next week, the U.S. Capitol Historical Society (USCHS) is co-hosting the inaugural, virtual Three Branches Institute for Teachers on July 20-22, 2021, along with the White House Historical Society and the Supreme Court Historical Society. This program is designed to provide resources and networking opportunities to educators teaching U.S. civics. The event spans three afternoons, each focusing on a branch of government. Teaching the fundamentals of American government helps provide students with a well-rounded understanding of the creation of this great nation. Registration is free and open to all teachers through July, 15, 2021. For more information on how and where to sign up for this amazing opportunity, click below!
