Dear friend, This week, the House voted on H.R. 139, the SHOW Up Act, to end

COVID-era telework policies and get federal workers back in the office.

According to a Federal Times report this past October, just one in three federal workers has returned to work full-time since the beginning of the pandemic in 2020. Government-wide telework has resulted in backlogs in services like issuing tax returns, renewing U.S. passports, and administering Social Security benefits. The rest of America has returned to work; it's time that federal workers do the same. Do you agree that federal workers should return to in-person work?
