) At the beginning of January, I took the oath of office to support and defend the Constitution and was sworn into the U.S. House of Representatives to continue serving the people of Ohio's Fifth

District(<https://latta.house.gov/district/map.htm>) .It's the honor of my life to be your voice in our nation's capital. My wife, Marcia, and I also received our new Member and spouse pins for the 118th Congress (pictured below). Being sworn into the U.S. House of Representatives is a great honor, but even more so with Marcia by my side. 1 2 Bob and his wife, Marcia, receive their new Member and spouse pins Cracking down on fentanyl() halt Our nation continues to battle a devastating poisoning crisis - the vast majority attributed to illicit fentanyl - which has claimed tens of thousands of American lives. That is why I am co-leading the HALT Fentanyl Act to permanently schedule fentanyl-related substances as a Schedule I narcotic to crack down on this scourge. I am pleased this bill has advanced through the Energy and Commerce Committee (with bipartisan support) and now awaits a vote before the full U.S. House of Representatives. Click

Increasing domestic energy production to lower costs() HR 1 Passes House I have heard from countless residents in Ohio's Fifth District that high energy costs have burdened families, farmers, manufacturers, and everyone in between. Anti-energy policies by the Biden Administration have stifled energy production in America, leading to this energy affordability crisis. That is why I have been working on solutions within the Energy and Commerce Committee to advance pro-energy growth policies. And just last month, the House passed H.R. 1 - the Lower Energy Costs Act - which works to increase domestic energy production to lower costs for communities across America. I was pleased to help craft this important pro-energy legislation and was also proud that my bill, the REFINER Act, was included in this energy package. Click southern border() Latta Southern Border Bob receives a briefing at the southern border in Texas Drug cartels are exploiting our southern border by trafficking deadly fentanyl into our country. Fentanyl is responsible for poisoning and killing Americans - including Ohioans - by the thousands. Here are some statistics: In just one year, 107,622 Americans died of a drug poisoning. Over 70,000 of those drug poisoning deaths were attributed to Ohio, there were 5,017 overdoses in one year. 81% of those drug overdose deaths were attributed to fentanyl. A crisis of this magnitude commands our attention, which is why the Energy and Commerce Committee took action recently by holding a congressional hearing at the southern border in McAllen, Texas. During our field hearing, we witnessed what is happening at our southern border, questioned officials, and heard from witnesses who discussed the importance of border security. We also heard from officials who highlighted the importance of passing the HALT Fentanyl Act - legislation I've introduced in Congress - to crack down on this scourge and save lives. It's far past time Congress addresses the crisis at our southern border. Passing the HALT Fentanyl Act and advancing other border security measures that put the safety and well-being of American communities first are necessary steps in the right direction.
