That's why I'm thrilled that this week House Democrats passed a bold funding package that directs dollars toward child care, women's rights, climate justice, and so much more. Here are just a few things we secured in the House bill that I am especially proud of: $19.6 billion for child care programs $105.7 billion for food assistance $5.5 billion for substance use treatment $3.1 billion for mental health programs $1 billion for 125,000 new low-income housing vouchers $53.2 billion to combat the climate crisis Includes a directive to the VA to implement a comprehensive sexual assault and harassment policy And for the first time, we passed a budget that didn't include the discriminatory Hyde and Helms Amendments – a huge win for reproductive rights here and around the world. I am proud to support this bill, which not only confronts the challenges that have been exacerbated by the pandemic, but also helps us build a more equitable and sustainable future for all Americans.
