Date: Fri, 24 Mar 2023 10:28:40 -0400 Representative Lori Trahan (<https://trahan.house.gov>) Friend, I've been pushing to update the laws that protect our data rights and our children while we're online. Many of the policies on the books right now were written in the 90's or early 2000's, and they're way outdated. Yesterday, the CEO of TikTok testified before Congress for the first time. I got the chance to ask him questions about what the social media app is doing to improve protections for teens and young users, and to fulfill its promise to be as transparent as possible. Like the previous testimony of other Big Tech executives, I was disappointed with TikTok's answers, and I believe we need comprehensive privacy and child protection laws more than ever. But, I want to hear from you... Survey Question: Should Congress pass legislation to protect our privacy and children online? Survey Responses:
