A Year in Photos

Friend,

Without question, the most important part of my job is serving my constituents in Virginia's First District. From every piece of legislation to every vote, I always put the needs and interests of my constituents first. 2021 was no doubt filled with challenges. But it was also filled with many successes both in Washington D.C. and throughout Virginia's First District. I wanted to highlight some important moments from the past year. It's been an honor to serve you in 2021, and I look forward to continuing my work in 2022. We have a one-stop-shop mentality in my office, and it is critical that constituents contacting or visiting my office receive the best service possible. When we're not assisting constituents over the phone or in my office, I am working to find real solutions through common sense policies and legislation. I have worked with my colleagues from both sides of the aisle to draft and pass commonsense policy solutions that best serve the American people. It is when we work together that we do our best work on behalf of the nation. To learn more about legislation I have introduced or co-sponsored so far in the 117th Congress, click here. To receive updates on the policies that matter most to you, click here. When I'm not in Washington, I can be found throughout the First district meeting with farmers, parents and business owners, and employees. These meetings and visits are a great opportunity to see all of the work folks are doing, and they are also an important opportunity to learn about how I can better represent the needs of my constituents in Washington. It is because of these visits with folks, and their willingness to share their experiences and thoughts with me, that I gain valuable insight and hands-on experiences that allow me to do better work on behalf of the District. I am working to ensure our military and service members have the proper resources, funding, and support they need to keep our nation safe. Our service men and women make incredible sacrifices and put the safety and security of our nation above themselves. Providing them with the resources they need to succeed is the least we can do. Throughout the year, I had the opportunity to meet with our men and women in uniform to hear their concerns and what I can do to better equip our service members for duty. To learn more about how I am working to support our military and national defense in Washington, click here. Virginia's First District is home to one of the nation's largest veterans' populations. I have long believed that our men and women in uniform have earned our great respect through sacrifice and hardship, and we owe them a debt of gratitude for that service. Through meetings, roundtables, and visiting with constituents in the District, I have been honored to meet with our nation's veterans throughout the year to discuss what can be done to provide them with the best care, support, and resources for civilian life. To learn more about my legislation and work on behalf of our nation's veterans, click here. Our district is also home to many law enforcement officers and first responders who represent selfless and exceptional dedication to serving their communities and neighbors. They lead in a crisis, are the first to respond, and often risk their lives for the good of others. This year, I hosted a roundtable meeting with First District Law Enforcement Officers to directly hear about what can be done to ensure our police departments and first responders are receiving the proper resources to best serve their communities and keep their citizens safe. To learn more about my advocacy on behalf of our law enforcement and first responders, click here.

Virginia's First District is filled with an abundance of natural resources that play important roles in the culture, economy, and recreation of our region. As a lifelong conservationist and avid outdoorsman, I have a distinct appreciation for the need to ensure the health of our environment so that it may be enjoyed by future generations. While I work to implement policies that protect our environment in Washington, I also make it a priority to engage in these conservation efforts throughout the district. Through activities such as the Chesapeake Bay Clean the Bay Day and other community-led activities and clean ups, I always enjoy working with folks throughout the district to protect and keep our environments safe. To learn more about my work on behalf of our environment and natural resources, click here.

The COVID-19 pandemic has challenged our communities and nation in many ways. But throughout these challenges, I have been consistently amazed by the resiliency of folks throughout the First District. Between developing and working at testing and vaccination centers and providing general COVID-19 related care, our frontline healthcare heroes throughout Virginia's First District put the needs of their communities first. Throughout the many adversities created from this pandemic, the hard work and dedication of those on the frontlines has been an inspiration. I have had the opportunity to visit many of these clinics and medical facilities to meet the individuals who work tirelessly to keep our communities safer. They are a constant reminder that through working together, we have the hope of a brighter future. It has been an honor to serve you this past year, and I am looking forward to working together more in 2022. As always, do not hesitate to contact one of my offices if there is ever anything I can do for you.
