Last night, the President addressed the nation in his third State of the Union address. I disagreed with many of the President's assessments about the challenges facing American families and his proposals for how to move our country forward.

We have yet to see a viable plan from this administration to address the crisis at our southern border. While the president's policies have not addressed the needs of our state, the fentanyl crisis perpetuated by ineffective border policies continues to ravage our communities. This administration has not supplied the resources necessary to address this crisis as cities across the country are overwhelmed with decades-high migration levels. Additionally, while the administration's policies have increased vehicle scanning capacity at the border, these policies have not addressed the volume of traffic at the border which continues to overwhelm our border patrol. That is why my colleagues and I have introduced the Texas Border Security Plan to take the necessary steps to secure our southern border and protect our communities.

As your Representative in Congress, I will continue to hold this administration accountable, work to remove officials in the administration whose policies have failed our country, such as Secretary Mayorkas, and advance policies that secure our border and keep our country safe. I am honored to serve you in Congress and look forward to continuing to keep you up to date on my work for you in Congress.

Sincerely,

Member of Congress
