#000000;">Hi Evan,  lowa's farmers are critical to the American economy, providing the essential service of feeding and fueling our country. With input costs up and inflation driving profits down, producers are facing enough difficulties without worrying about D.C. hurting their business. They deserve far better than to be saddled with the consequences of politicians not doing their job. >&nbsp;>That's why, today, I voted to extend funding for critical farm programs for a year so lowa's producers can have the certainty they need to continue running their operations after a busy harvest season.    <a of all critical programs that the more than 84,000 lowa farmers rely on, including:    Fully funding the farm safety net through commodity programs and crop insurance support for conservation programs development, including infrastructure and health care services Expansion of rural broadbandInvestment in agricultural innovation energy costs for Americans <span style="font-size: 13pt; text-align:
