brazen than the so-called 9/11 Passenger Security Fee, which is advertised to fund aviation security measures meant to make our air travel safer and movement through the airport screening lines faster.  However, , has been diverted to the U.S. Treasury for expenses having nothing to do with aviation security whatsoever.To address this fraud, I introduced the bipartisan Stop the Scam Act, which aims to end the diversion of the Passenger Security Fee and ensure it is allocated directly towards funding aviation security checkpoints to prevent the next September 11th. Now, I want to hear from you!On September 11, 2001, shortly after graduating from the Naval Academy, I was assigned to my first ship. There, I watched the harrowing attacks unfold on television alongside my shipmates. Like many New Yorkers, I too lost friends and loved ones that day.

In response, we made a solemn vow never to allow a terrorist attack of that magnitude to occur again on American soil.
br>
Just two months after the September 11th terrorist attacks, the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) was founded. Subsequently, Congress introduced the Passenger Security Fee, also known as the 9/11 Security Fee. This fee was established to provide the TSA with a consistent source of revenue for acquiring the latest security checkpoint technology.   My bill would ensure the fee is used for its originally stated purpose.
